

2008 Virginia General Assembly Session
Legislative Report
March 1, 2008

* * * * *

With the scheduled adjournment of the 2008 session just one week away, The Virginia Supreme Court dropped a bombshell on legislators when they ruled that the regional transportation funding plans passed last year were unconstitutional. By ruling that the two newly-created transportation authorities in Tidewater and N. VA. lack the constitutional authority to impose taxes and fees, the core premise of last year's HB 3202 is now invalid. The net result is that last year's legislation, which attempted to push the taxing authority along with the collection and disbursement of these new transportation funds down to the regional level, can no longer be implemented and any funds generated as a result of doing so must be returned to the payor!

Legislators and the Governor are reeling over this news for three reasons.

- 1) Very few legislators want to re-open the transportation funding debate, which quickly turns into a question of "to tax or not to tax" - a discussion that becomes political very quickly.
- 2) The current session is proposing hardly anything in the way of transportation funding. But with this court ruling about $500 million in proposed projects, some scheduled to begin as early as this summer, are now unable to go forward.
- 3) Reaching consensus on a solution to the ruling could prove very difficult as putting humpty dumpty back together again can be a much more difficult task when assigned to a very partisan General Assembly.

My best guess at this very early stage is that we may be looking at a the Governor calling a special session in the Spring to deal specifically with this issue. In the meantime, all bets are off on where we stand on transportation funding.

And while we are on this subject, this week the House Finance Committee killed the only bill (SB 713) the Senate has offered to generate new transportation dollars, a penny-a-year increase for five years to the gas tax. The vote was 14-6 to kill this bill and what is even more interesting is that a number of prominent democrats (Moran and Armstrong) voted to kill the bill. For what's its worth, VUHCC and every other road-building group lobbied in favor of passage.

So what's left is $180 million that the House has in their budget for transportation funding, and they have chosen to bond these dollars and opposed to spending valuable cash, given the tough economic times ahead. While this is really a very minimum amount of new funding given the statewide needs, VUHCC supports the House proposal and is lobbying the Senate budget conferees to go along with the House proposal. With the court ruling referenced above however, all bets are off on the $180 million as the issue has now mushroomed into a much larger dilemma.

Two other matters that were addressed this week.

In a big victory for the business community the Senate killed the Homestead Exemption (HB 11) legislation which I have discussed in earlier legislative reports by the razor thin vote of 21 to 19. The result of that action will ultimately save the business community millions of dollars in new taxes that would have been assessed had the legislation passed.

And on the matter of Impact Fees supplanting Proffers, the bill (SB 768) that eeked out of the Senate earlier in the session was carried over by the House after key House republicans, including The Speaker, were persuaded that the bill needed the benefit of lots more discussion before being considered by the Assembly.

With one week to go before the session's scheduled adjournment, legislators are now focused on the budget negotiations and how to react to the now re-opened wound called "transportation funding".
